

Globalists demand a "less white" Europe

• 30. September 2024

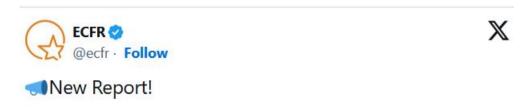

Symbolic image of European cultural heritage. (C) R24/KI

In a world that is increasingly descending into madness, a new dimension of absurdity is now revealed: Europe's self-proclaimed elites have made it their mission to rob the continent of its identity. Under the guise of "diversity" and "inclusion," a perfidious plan is being pushed forward that aims at nothing less than the erasure of Europe's heritage.

A comment by Heinz Steiner

The latest publication by the globalist European Council on Foreign Relations (ECFR) reads like a manifesto of the cultural suicide of the "old continent". With a boldness that is second to none, they claim that Europe is "too white" and "too Western". You rub your eyes and ask yourself: Is this still reality or is it already the nightmare of an Orwellian dystopia?

Today's EU resembles a Barbieland: a place prone to regard itself as more perfect than it is. Our 3rd edition of the "European Sentiment Compass" examines Europeans' sense of shared space, future & values. @ECF_tweets

The architect of this madness, Pawel Zerka, raves about a "post-Western world" and seriously calls for a "decolonization" of Europe. What a mockery! As if the cradle of Western civilization, the continent that gave the world enlightenment, democracy and human rights, should now suddenly be declared a blot on history.

But that's not all: these self-proclaimed do-gooders fantasize about a "Barbieland" in which Europe should shed its identity like a worn-out piece of clothing and reinvent itself. The globalists dream of a continent that opens its borders to the masses of the Third World, while they themselves reside in their well-guarded residential areas. The hypocrisy of these elites knows no bounds. While they preach that Europe must become "less white," they themselves are enjoying the fruits of the civilization they so vehemently reject. They indulge in luxury while convincing ordinary citizens that they must sacrifice their culture and traditions for the greater good.

Europe has been a predominantly white continent for the entirety of its history.

Just because some bureaucrats have decided against the will of the people that we should suddenly be a minority on our own continent, doesn't mean we should let it happen.

Say no to being replaced.

5:05 p.m. · June 30, 2024

The attempt to exploit European youth for this project of cultural self-dissolution is particularly perfidious. With well-sounding phrases like "cosmopolitanism" and "global solidarity" an entire generation is being seduced into denying their heritage and alienating themselves.

But what is the real goal of this dystopian globalist agenda? It is about nothing less than the creation of a faceless, rootless mass that is easy to control and manipulate. A Europe without identity, without history, without pride – that is the wet dream of the globalists. The irony is that the same forces that want to "decolonize" Europe are actually practicing a new form of colonialism. They want to strip the continent of its soul and transform it into a soulless construct that serves the interests of a global elite.

X

Central and Eastern European countries are increasingly questioning multicultural ideals promoted by Western Europe, according to a new report.

"It's as if Central and Eastern Europe had to prove they're sufficiently European," says @ECFR 's @PawelZerka.

6:07 pm · Sep 26 2024

It is high time that Europeans wake up and put a stop to this madness. The diversity of European cultures, the rich history and the unique heritage of this continent are not eyesores to be eradicated, but rather treasures to be preserved. We are at a crossroads. Either we allow Europe to degenerate into a colorless, identity-less "Barbieland," or we return to our roots and defend what defines us. The decision lies with each and every one of us.