

La Cruna dell'Ago

di Cesare Sacchetti

Neurological disorders of vaccinees and those absurd suicides without explanation

Apr 08, 2025 By Cesare Sacchetti

People are often asked where the evidence is of vaccinees' illnesses or their sudden deaths, and if so, all they have to do is point to it.

They are there, for example, in the VAERS database, a digital repository in which adverse effects of serums in the United States are recorded, and keep in mind that the numbers here are very downward because often several deaths caused by vaccines do not even end up in VAERS.

Despite a downward estimate, as early as 2021, the first year of vaccination, the numbers of deaths and illnesses were beginning to be counted in the hundreds of thousands, and the same situation could be seen in the European Eudravigilance database.

There are the scientific studies published in the journals of the field always punctually ignored by the press organs that 5 years ago hastened to publish dozens and dozens of false studies in which the Covid vaccine was attributed a safety and efficacy against the so-called Sars-Cov2 virus, to this day still not isolated, when in 2021 one could know practically nothing certain about the serums, simply because they were experimental.

The true content of the vaccines was not even known at that time because according to what was written in the various spoofs, the main serums distributed by pharmaceutical companies, such as Pfizer, Moderna, Astrazeneca and Johnson & Johnson, were in the first two cases based on the molecule called mRNA, while in the other two they contained the famous chimpanzee adenovirus.

None of this, however, turned out to be correct. None of this turned out to be true.

The pharmaceutical companies have developed a type of drug that has very little to do with biology, and much more to do instead with computer technology, if one considers that analyses provided by Professor Pablo Campra of the University of Almeria indicate the presence of the now famous graphene in the sera along with electronic components known as nanobots, about which we have said many times in the past.

The vaccine is, in other words, an extremely elaborate compound, on which tens of millions of dollars have been invested, but certainly not to improve people's health, as mendaciously the pharmaceutical companies and the Conte and Draghi governments have tried to make people believe.

The interaction of these two main elements does anything but bring any benefit to those who receive them, given that graphene is already in itself a toxic substance for the immune system, and the cause of several thrombi, as recognized even in unsuspected times by several scientific researchers, certainly not close to the so-called "no vax" world, again to use this meaningless expression originated by the various newspapers.

For nanobots, the discourse is perhaps even more complex and dystopian because these, in addition to creating a kind of real-time tracking of the people who receive them, carry even more disturbing implications if one considers that the scientific literature, the real one ignored by the media, speaks openly about them.

Israel's experiments on nanobots

Back in 2016, for example, a group of Israeli scientists led by Professor Schachar Arnon of the Efi Arazi School of Computer Science presented extremely advanced research that would have been considered science fiction only a few decades earlier.

Arnon and his collaborators had managed to put nanobots in the brains of some cockroaches through which they were able to control their movements and actions.

An "enlightened" cockroach

Through a remote signal, these cockroaches would suddenly activate and give off a green light as soon as they received the external pulse.

It sounds absurd, but it is a reality tested by Israeli scientists who have received lavish funding from the Israeli government and pharmaceutical companies to develop this kind of technology of which, frankly, one can only glimpse negative and extremely dangerous effects on human free will, since tomorrow, these technologies could also be used for political purposes and to build a type of masses in the grip of abulia and controlled remotely by puppeteers locked in the control room.

Humanity thus reduced to little more than a remote-controlled herd as in a video game, and this is exactly the kind of men and women desired by the pharmaceutical overlords who sat on this empire, thankfully declining, in the hands of the usual families of international finance.

Recurring then is the presence of Israelis in this kind of dystopian design.

In fact, the Jewish state can be said to have been the first to be interested in nanobots more than any other, back in 2013, when the Israeli scientist, Ido Bachelet, enthusiastically presented at a conference these devices and their "mind-blowing" applications.

Ido Bachelet's presentation of how nanobots work

Bachelet spoke of it as the future frontier of medicine, and how these invisible electronic devices would be able to better treat patients, but in reality he himself probably and the pharmaceutical companies had something else in mind.

It was not a year after that lecture of his that Pfizer was the one who called him, who "enlightened" by his lecture decided to start a collaboration with him that cannot be ruled out at all as having been decisive for the inclusion of nanobots in Covid vaccines.

This brings us to the most recent years of vaccinations that are causing a wave of sudden deaths, turbo cancers of various kinds that have also taken several show business personalities with them, and a series of neurological disorders all of course hushed up by the usual press organs that in addition to putting pizzas, sandwiches, mozzarella in the dock, have now thought "well" to also blame daylight saving time.

Neurological disorders in vaccinees

In addition to these phenomena, there is another troubling one that some scientific studies have highlighted, and that is the close correlation between Covid-19 vaccines and neurological disorders of various kinds.

One reads more and more about people suddenly struck down by brain aneurysms, and one opens the Google news section, one can, unfortunately, have direct evidence of this.

There is the case, for example, of Delia Perevengo, an administrative director in Turin who died at age 57 from a brain aneurysm, but there is also the case of Jacopo Apolloni, who died at age 18 for the same reason, not to mention little Mattia Cossettini, who died at age 9 also from a brain aneurysm.

Shedding light on what is happening may be a study entitled "Impact of Covid-19 disease and Covid-19 vaccinations on hospital admissions for neurological diseases," published recently by some Italian neurologists led by Dr. Andrea Salmaggi of the Lecco ASST.

As early as 2021, in the Lombardy region, it could be found that the percentage of vaccinated people with diseases such as cerebral aneurysms, encephalitis, TIAs, and myelitis was far higher than that of unvaccinated people.

Impact of COVID-19 disease and COVID-19 vaccinations on hospital admissions for neurological diseases in the Lombardia over-12 population. Data from a self-controlled case series analysis

Andrea Salmaggi¹ · Francesco Bortolan² · Michele Ercolanoni² · Paul Stefan Vrabie² · Francesco Cideni² · Olivia Leoni² · Filippo Martinelli Boneschi³

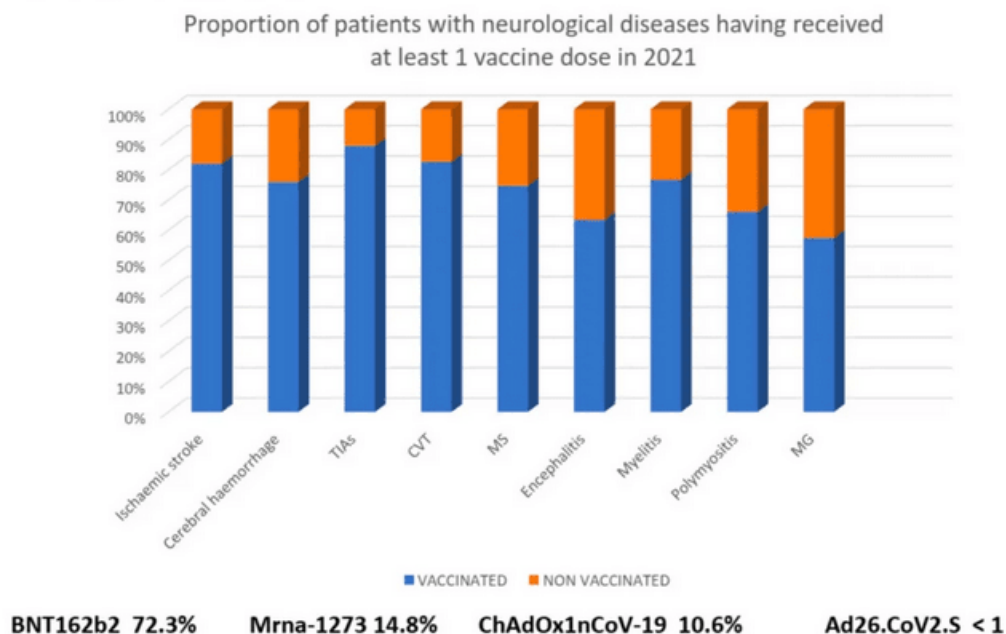

Fig. 1 Proportion of patients with neurological diseases having received at least 1 vaccine dose in 2021

Statistics on hospitalizations of vaccinees and their neurological diseases published by Dr. Salmaggi's group

Vaccines, even then, were already producing their devastating effects, and today we are seeing the real and very large extent of the damage that these drugs, true synthetic weapons, are causing on the bodies of the people who received them.

Even outside the country's borders, more studies have been published that seem to corroborate the conclusions of the Italian neurologists.

Such is the case with the research carried out by two Iranian scientists Roya Hosseini and Nayere Askari of Kernan University, who in their study published in February 2023 in the European Journal of Medical Research come to virtually the same conclusions as their Italian colleagues.

Hosseini and Askari made use of the available numbers published in the aforementioned VAERS, and found the close causality between vaccinations and the occurrence of ischemia, cerebral aneurysms, multiple sclerosis, epilepsy, and Bell's palsy, which, as many will recall, was quite common in the first vaccinations of 2021.

Another case that caused a sensation and seemed to confirm the very close relationship between vaccinations and neurological diseases was that of the ten nurses at a Boston hospital who all developed brain tumors, and, according to the People's Voice website, all received the vaccine.

Virtually similar situation for three firefighters in Arezzo who developed three glioblastomas, but the unions and the media instead of highlighting the numbers of vaccine recipients who are dying from neural diseases, prefer, of course, to gloss over and try to blame the suits of the three men, who unfortunately died.

So it is certainly undisputed that the ingredients in the serum seem to have multiple devastating effects, but more studies would be needed to further investigate the causal link between graphene and nanobots on the one hand and on their effects on the brain and psychic balance of the vaccinated person on the other.

The mental disorders of vaccinees

Studies published in scientific journals halfway around the world on the psychological damage caused by vaccinations are not counted here either.

There is the famous and already mentioned study from South Korea that is particularly reliable, considering that the sample is really large and covers 50 percent of the vaccinated population in Seoul.

The results are disarming and worrying at the same time.

Once they received the various serums, regardless of brand, numerous vaccinees began to exhibit dissociative disorders of various kinds that actually altered their personalities.

And the same cases were found, among others, by Dr. Patrick Flannery, of the San Diego Institute of Biological Studies, who was confronted with the case of a 20-year-old woman who began to suffer from hallucinations and catalepsy after receiving the serum.

In several other cases, suicidal tendencies are recurrent such as those found by Turkish psychiatrist Umit Haluk Yesilkaya, who studied the case of 42-year-old vaccinated man who developed psychomotor disorders and repeatedly attempted suicide.

The numbers on mental disorders and suicide attempts were already alarming the first year of vaccination, and they were all recorded in the VigiBase database, which, in April 2021 alone, already reported 100 thousand cases of psychiatric disorders that arose in vaccinees after receiving the various serums.

Those absurd suicides without an explanation

The numbers today are even more alarming, and there are some cases in Italy of strange and absurd suicides that deserve to be examined closely such as that of Matteo Caucci, a 29-year-old young man from Ancona.

Matteo worked in Bologna, where he apparently led a normal life.

His father, Luigi, a craftsman, had picked him up in his own car on Feb. 10 in the Bologna capital to take him home to the Marche region.

Arriving at kilometer 27 on the A14, however, Matteo felt an intestinal distress and asked his father to pull over for a moment to try to seek some relief.

Suddenly, something unpredictable and absurd happens. Instead of staying in the emergency lane, waiting for the illness to pass, Matteo picks up and starts running toward the highway where he is dramatically run over by two trucks.

The A14 highway, the place where Matthew lost his life.

Everyone is appalled. Matteo's father who saw his son die before his eyes in that absurd manner and the two drivers who happened to run over the poor young man blamelessly.

There is no logical sense in this affair, because it does not appear that Matteo had any intention of committing suicide, much less so suddenly and so crazily, nor can one think that an intestinal illness led him to run into the middle of a highway where those road giants pass by at hundreds of kilometers per hour.

Matthew, however, does not turn out to be the only one who died in this absurd manner.

There are other cases in the local news, ignored of course by the national media, with the same inexplicable anomalies that deserve far more thorough investigations.

This is the case of a man who, once again on the A14, pulled his car over in the emergency lane on Sunday, Feb. 1, and then made the same crazy gesture as Matthew.

He, too, threw himself against a TIR, but the Rimini Today article is stingy with details, perhaps intentionally, and does not dwell on how things really went down and whether this man had any mental disorders.

Il Resto del Carlino reveals a few more details about the man named Davide Cesarini, a 48-year-old assistant manager of the RivieraBanca branch in Tavullia.

Davide Cesarini

No one expected such an act. Davide seemed well known in the area, and he apparently had no psychiatric disorder or some form of depression that would suggest such an act in the same equally dramatic manner in which Matteo Caucci died.

In Roncadelle, Brescia, on the A4 highway, the exact same scenario.

A man suddenly threw himself in front of a TIR that inevitably ran him over, killing him instantly.

No apparent explanation even there for this absurd death.

If one searches the aforementioned google news section, one will see that these kinds of events have become more frequent after 2021, whereas in earlier years similar cases seem very few indeed.

This is uncharted territory. If these people had received the vaccine, then there were those elements in their bodies that emerged in Campra's analysis and that are capable of causing, as seen, a whole range of mental disorders.

Vaccination was certainly a means to achieve widespread depopulation as the Davos forum itself advocated in 1991 in one of its confidential documents, and as Bill Gates announced in 2014 in his Tedx lecture, in which he stated that the "good work of vaccines" would help in this regard.

There is, however, the other, more disturbing aspect, namely, that of the effects these serums produce on people's minds, who are, unfortunately, not infrequently found to lose their minds and die in the most unthinkable ways and without a logical explanation.

The vaccine was undoubtedly what accompanied man to the threshold of transhumanity, and it is by no means certain that those who participated in such an experiment would be able to return to a normal life without suffering the effects of these serums.

The "science" that has developed these deadly drugs is extremely advanced, but the enemy of humanity, and the world needs as soon as possible another science, a real one that serves man and wants to help him recover, if possible, from what these "vaccines" have caused.

Many people and many children are dying.

There is a need for truth and justice for all the victims of this slaughter.